Sustainable Urban Development Strategies: The New Era

A sustainable urban development strategy is a tool that Greek cities can take advantage of, in order to develop new infrastructure that will ameliorate everyday life within their limits, as well as actively enhance their social economic and social cohesion. A series of obstacles and malfunctions has occurred during the implementation of these Strategies within the 2014-20 Programming Period. What kind of obstacles did occur and how did the municipalities and managing authorities cope with them? What lessons should be taken into consideration within the 2021-27 Programming Period?
